In Dedication

Miss Dorothy Mahoney

"Mercy has a human face . . . Kindness a human heart"

We started in September of 1965 with 134 strong . . . but frightened freshmen who were too inhibited to look beyond our microscopes and bed linen to see our instructors as anything but towering paragons of perfection. When the newness wore off and our level of confidence reached a new high, we found ourselves gazing at the threshold of junior year. Professional relationships took on a deeper meaning. It was here amongst the cry of babies and the laughter of children at play that we met someone who grew to be an everpresent influence and guide. Miss Mahoney's winning glow and sincere interest won her the admiration of us all. Her contributions to our class are innumerable. She was mainly responsible for our parents day program, she strongly supported the students as advisor to dorm board and as an active member of the student-faculty relationships committee, and she vigorously planned and participated in the proctor workshop to make it a success.

Miss Mahoney is a dynamic nurse, an inspiring instructor, a dedicated teacher, and above all a sincere and true friend. For these and many unspoken reasons, we dedicate this, our yearbook, to Miss Dorothy Mahoney.

Judy Cerucci

Ever since Florence Nightingale studied under the Sisters of Charity and developed her own system, nursing has been undergoing revisions and advancements. At times, the change seemed so gradual that it was almost negligible, and at other times conditions seemed so destitute that some change was almost inevitable. Can you imagine a modern day nurse doing tracheostomy care with long flowing sleeves and starched white cuffs, or living in a cloister with a satisfied mind as her only salary? Today these ideas are not only outdated but impractical. The following excerpt includes many nursing duties of the past.

In addition to caring for your fifty patients each nurse will follow these regulations:

1. Daily sweep and mop the floors of your ward, dust the patient's furniture and window sills.

2. Maintain an even temperature in your ward by bringing in a scuttle of coal for the day's business.

3. Light is important to observe the patient's condition. Therefore, each day fill kerosene lamps, clean chimneys, and trim wicks. Wash the windows once a week.

4. Each nurse on day duty will report every day at 7 a.m. and leave at 8 p.m., except on the Sabbath on which you will be off from noon to 2 p.m.

5. Graduate nurses in good standing with the director of nurses will be given an evening off each week if you go regularly to church.

6. Any nurse who smokes, uses liquor in any form, gets her hair done at a beauty shop, or frequents dance halls will give the director of nurses good reason to suspect her worth, intentions, and integrity.

7. Each nurse should lay aside from each pay day a goodly sum of her earnings for her benefits during her declining years, so that she will not become a burden. For example, if you earn $30 a month you should set aside $15.

In comparison, the nursing of today truly exemplifies that times change. But people change, too. This book exemplifies that we are still changing.

MINIONS

"Rule #1, establish good rapport with your co-workers!"

"I'm thrilled, thrilled, positively thrilled!"

"God bless you Dr. Papanicolaou!"

"For the 126th time today."

"Dr. Cobbett—Obstetrician."

"Meet your new son, Mr. Jones."

"Clean your cups when you're finished, girls!"

"Where are you BLI?"

"PERI–TIME!"

"The line-up."

Peculiar, remarkable, perhaps even pretty, but most likely quite different from what you expected. Plump or thin, heavy black hair, or a bit of blond fuzz, each baby is a definite little individual at birth, special in his own way . . . Self-centered, demanding, inconsistent—but so grateful for small favors. A sip of milk, a little cuddling and he's limp as a kitten again.

Help me to realize the trauma a child experiences,

Let me know his feelings that make him withdrawn, frightened,
sad. Teach me to understand his pain.

Concern me with his care—physical, mental, emotional.

Give me knowledge to tell his parents what to expect,

Give me courage to cope with their emotions, to alleviate their suffering.

Grant me an eager heart to play with this child, to read to him, to simply be with him, to let him know that I care.

Care? How I care—so much that sometimes I ache.

Yes, help me to realize that I must wipe away his tears and replace them with a smile of trust and of love.

"My mother always said I was a ladies man."

"Catch me if you can!!"

"What's wrong with two and a half drops a minute??"

"Pediculosis!"

"Measles are like that—yeh, they are!"

"I'll give you a lollipop!!"

"How'd I get myself into this mess?"

"Yuk!"

"Maybe if I ignore her she'll go away."

"I tell you, Doc, she just likes to hold my hand."

"Do you think this is the one he wants?"

"Medical science cures again."

"What a learning experience!"

A TOAST
by Sally Johnson, Former Director
MGH School of Nursing

May you typify the pin you wear;
With Indian, the star, the olive wreath,
The bow, the arrow, and circle blue
Each day and hour, it's your armour true.

Like the Indian
Have dauntless courage, and watchful be,
Reliant, skillful, resolute and strong;
With patience and enduring valour
Perform your duty in heroic manner.

May the Star
Be one of hope, saying "go on, go on".
May it always shine beneath your cloud
With lustre and radiance brightening your day,
Showing you the world, not sad, but gay.

May the Circle
Bring an endless ring of true friendships;
For no one deserves them more than you
Who give of yourselves to those in need
And help them along by word and deed.

May the Olive Branch
Bring Peace and plenty and right good will,
Much inner resource and real content.
Your past has made good history;
May your future bring more victory.
